Description: Orticolario is freshly promoting the international competition for the building of themed gardens and art-landscape installations on the grounds of Villa Erba in Cernobbio, Italy, where the exhibition is to be held.

The common thread running through Orticolario 2016 will be the sixth sense, leading to dialogue between man and nature. The flower of the year will be the Anemone.

Registration for the competition is free, and submissions should be in writing no later than January 31, 2016, to info@orticolario.it.

The purpose of the initiative is to find innovative design ideas, techniques, and materials that accord with the theme, the aesthetic goals, and the quality standards of the event.

The projects must be designs for original spaces, for gardens that can be lived in and enjoyed, for spaces that will provide suitable places for private meditation and will fit in with the context of the grounds of Villa Erba and its chosen area, and thus fully in harmony with the existing landscape or the 'Genius loci'.

The competition, with the details and the rules for taking part, can be seen at Orticolario's website.

The selected projects will be realized for the eighth edition of Orticolario and will be judged by a specially convened International Jury. The prize is “La foglia d’oro del Lago di Como” (The Golden Leaf of Lake Como)
